Geekdom – A Collaborative Workspace for Inventors & Entrepreneurs

Nicholas Longo

Nicholas Longo, Director of Strategic Initiatives at Rackspace hosting and Director of Geekdom, will be our speaker for January 2012 and will speak on Geekdom – A Collaborative Workspace for Inventors & Entrepreneurs. Geekdom is a new collaborative workspace in San Antonio where entrepreneurs, technologists, developers, makers and creatives help each other build businesses and other cool things together. Mr. Longo will explain collaborative workspaces and how they are like co-working spaces where members can rent dedicated desks or become community members and come anytime to work. Nicholas will describe how Geekdom is a low cost and technology focused resource where members help each other with development, marketing or creative skills, one on one or through workshops. Volunteering to mentor and help one another 1 hour a week or to give a workshop once a month is a requirement of membership at Geekdom.

Mr. Longo has a successful background in developing and marketing revolutionary software and building a multi-million-dollar software company from the ground up. He founded CoffeeCup Software which sold over 50,000,000 downloads of user friendly web design software in 11 years and was the #1 downloaded web design software for 10 consecutive years. Other industry awards were Best Web Enhancement in 1999 & 2000, Best Internet Communication Software in 2001, Best Web Enhancement Software in 2002 and Best Internet Enhancement in 2002-2004. Visit Geekdom at <http://geekdom.com> and Nicholas on Facebook at www.facebook.com/nlongo.

Also, please take this opportunity to pay your annual dues ($25/$95 Corporate), thanks!
