

Finding Licensees In Minutes Using The Power Of Agentic AI Alan Beckley

As an inventor time available to work on your invention competes against many other obligations including work, family and friends. You're lucky if your invention gets 2 or 3 hours of dedicated time from you each week.

How do you find potential licensees for your product? You could spend many hours searching Google, LinkedIn and Chat GPT looking for the "right" companies. Many weeks later, you've spent a lot of your precious time with not much to show for it. Frustrating, isn't it?

Now there is a better way that is dramatically faster which Alan Beckley has developed as an AI Agent, called the Invention Prospector, that does the "heavy lifting" of meticulous licensee research for you.

During the meeting, Alan will demonstrate this AI tool which will show how the process is amazingly fast and simple to do. Just fill out a simple online form as follows:

Describe your invention, what's unique about it – (avoid disclosing any IP);

List it's benefits, generally how it works and what makes it better;

List your website URL (if you have one);

List up to 5 different search phrases you'd use to look for similar products;

List up to 5 different competitors or potential licensee companies; and

Then Hit "Continue to Research"

Within less than 10 minutes, Claude.ai will conduct a broad research including Thomasnet.com and will generally find 30- 35 potential licensees for your invention. You'll get the company name, its website, the top 10 best licensee prospects and the rationale for each one.

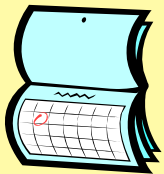

Alan Beckley exchanged 25 years as an engineer and telecom project manager by becoming the inventor of a slim wallet to solve the rump bump problem. Alan sold his product in military base PXs, VA hospitals, even at gun shows until he was able to sell for 2 years on QVC. Subsequently, he achieved his goal of licensing via direct TV when Allstar Products commercialized his wallets out to over 10,000 retail stores as the Wonder Wallet.

Today, he helps empower other inventors through coaching, webinars and his podcast, Inventors Helping Inventors, with over 600 episodes available on all major podcast platforms.

Alamo Inventors members and meeting attendees will get to "test drive" the Invention Prospector for free using it to find potential licensees for their own inventions. His only ask is that you give him an honest review, describing your experience using the AI agent. Click HERE to download Invention Prospector and HERE on how to use it.
